

Principles & Promising Practices of Place-Based Education

JUNE 25–27, 2009

Thursday – Saturday

LOCATION: Shelburne Farms, Shelburne, VT

FEE: $389. One graduate credit available through Castleton State College for additional $175.

INSTRUCTORS: Delia Clark, Center for Place-based Learning & Community Engagement; Erica Curry, Shelburne Farms

- ▶ Take your students' place-based learning about the cultural and natural history of their town to another level.
- ▶ Discover ways to translate that knowledge into service-learning projects and activities that can enhance your community's understanding of place.
- ▶ Acquire practical teaching strategies to nurture a student's sense of place, commitment to practicing stewardship and enthusiasm for school-community relationships.
- ▶ Discover outstanding regional case studies and methods for accessing local resources.

We strongly recommend you apply with one or more colleagues from your community or school to enhance your learning and implementation.

This workshop will provide a practical framework for using your local community and environment as an integrating context for your teaching. The workshop will include curriculum development training and work time to synthesize your program learning into your own work plan, as well as one-on-one or group consultation with resource specialists in hands-on habitat explorations, community-based service learning projects, mapping skills, questing, or other topics indicated by participants in an advance needs assessment.
